SUSPECTS HELD IN BAD CHECK GANG

State-wide Check-passing Gang Believed Trapped; One Suspect Discloses Long Criminal Record

Virginia Farrera, said to be a resident of San Jose, was in jail yesterday charged with carrying a concealed weapon. She was arrested in Menlo Park Wednesday by Chief of Police Furman and Constable Grill. Two other arrests were expected late yesterday afternoon. The two other persons sought were James Farrari, alleged to be the husband of the woman arrested, and Vincent Lucich. Both are wanted on charges of passing bad checks.

The story as told by police yesterday is that Farrari would make the acquaintance with various business places. Later Lucich would appear and want to cash a check. The proprietor would not cash Lucich and would refuse. Then Farreri would come to his rescue and say that he knew Lucich well. This at any rate, is the way that they are charged with having played at Jigg's Corner in Menlo Park. The proprietor, however, was able to trace Farreri, and informed the police.

Chief of Police Furman went to the establishment just in time to see the woman trying to square the bad check with another which she was writing. She was taken into custody when she could produce neither a driver's lincense nor an ownership certificate for the car she was driving.

When the officer placed the car in the garage, he discovered a pistol in the car, and the charge of carrying concealed weapons was placed against the woman pending the outcome of the check charges against the two men. She will be given a hearing this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Lucich was found in San Francisco and was located in San Francisco yesterday and brought to Menlo here, where he was charged with passing fictitious checks. San Francisco police detectives found his record and find that he has a criminal record extending back to 1911 when he was sentenced to serve 30 days for battery. In 1914 he was implicated in a robbery of a Powell street cable car in San Francisco, and was sentenced to 15 years at Folsom.

Lucich was granted probation in 1923 and the following year was arrested with booze smugglers at Menlo. He was arrested in January of this year as a murder suspect and was, when arrested, at liberty on a bail of $10,000 with federal authorities.

Officers believe with the arrest of Lucich and the impending arrest of Farreri, that they will have broken a state-wide bad check passing gang which has been passing checks stolen from a San Francisco printing establishment. The man now under arrest is a printer and is believed to have been responsible for the theft of the checks.

Miss Florence Halsclaw was hostess at a dinner on Tuesday evening, April 3, at the Mark Hopkins Hotel, in honor of the birthday anniversaries of Dr. Ruth Murphy and Dr. Jessie Biermann. After the dinner, Miss Halsclaw and her guests enjoyed an evening of dancing at the hotel. Those entertained were Dr. Jewyl Ruth Murphy and Wm. H. Murphy of San Mateo, Dr. Jessie Biermann, Miss Ruth Leonard, Dr. Ernest C. Dr. Edw. Neville and Mr. Long.

Broadway Completed 1st of July

The opening of Broadway which has been loo ked forward to for years by the people of Redwood City will take place in June, City Attorney Mansfield stated yesterday. All preliminary work has been completed, and the buildings will be removed by the middle of next month.

The cost of the proposed improvement will be far less than was expected, Mansfield stated, ast the commissioners who have had the matter in charge have reduced expenses more than $27,000 below the estimate cost of the work.

The opening of Broadway has been planned for many years, and in 1926 a bond issue of $30,000 was voted by the people of Redwood City to pay for one third of the estimated expense of the work. This money is now in the city treasury and will be used as soon as assessments are paid. A committee consisting of E. B. Fox, L. A. Heiner and Walter T. Kellogg was appointed to arrange an assessment district and secure prices on the property which would have to be purchased.

The committee found that nine pieces of property would have to be acquired. These were secured at an expense of $57,423. Deeds to all of these pieces are now in escrow and will be turned over to the town shortly after the middle of May. An amount totaling $5,406.04 was used by the committee as incidental expenses, printing, engineering, stenography, searching titles, stationery and office rent.

The amount to be raised over the large assessment district is only $32.829.96. The assessments on this district will be due immediately after the first publication of an assessment notice which will be made shortly, and will be delinquent after thirty days. Assessments not paid within thirty days will be added to the taxes over a period of years. The greater part of the assessments will be less than $5.00.

The home of Miss Loraine Bresse was the scene of a pretty affair Saturday afternoon when Miss Bresse acted as hostess in honor of Miss Madeline Ross, who is to become the bride of Douglass Lampkin on Sunday. The guests were: Mrs. James Bowles, Mrs. Seymour Eikerenkotter, Miss Maude Stilleson, Miss Anna Olson, Miss Madeline Ross, Miss Mary Adams, Miss Clara Schweickert, Miss Mura Stilleson and Miss Nellie Adams.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Poole returned Sunday from Washington, where the former who is chairman of the county board of supervisors, went in regard to the San Francisco bridge project. Supervisor Francis of Halfmoon Bay and Supervisor Rosalie M. Brown of San Mateo were also in the party which accompanied the San Francisco supervisors to the capital.

Club Enjoys Style Show

Following the business meeting of the Redwood City Woman's Club yesterday afternoon, the members of the club enjoyed a style show put on by the Clemens Shoppes of this city and Burlingame. The styles were displayed under the direction of Mrs. Clemens and Babette, style writer of the San Francisco Examiner.

Five models were used and about 30 gowns and coats were displayed. These were in five groups, including the sports wear, active sports, spectators sports, tailored gowns and ensembles, afternoon wear, dinner wear and formal gowns. All models were taken from the stock of the two shops maintained by Mrs. Clemens.

Musical numbers were also enjoyed, including piano solos by Mrs. Arms and Miss Marion Moolland of Burlingame and a vocal solo by Mrs. B. F. Storm.

Mrs. Willis Frost, president of the Woman's Club, made arrangements for the affair.

Great Interest In Election

Interest was being manifest this week in the municipal election which will be held on Monday. Two organized campaigns were being made, one by friends of the incumbents, another by members of the Good Government League. Both groups have a full ticket of three trustees, and a clerk and treasurer, which they are seeking to elect. One candidate is running independently. John Carl, candidate for clerk.

The Present Administration League has been busy making a canvass of the town in the interests of Trustees McNulty, Stafford and Thorning, Treasurer B. E. Myers and Clerk W. A. Price.

The candidates sponsored by the Good Government League are: for trustees, M. F. Hughes, Victor Ravenbrandt and George Cawthron; for treasurer, George F. Paul; for clerk, Philip Owens.

Adherents to both parties have stated that they are sure of victory at the polls, but both are making a house to house canvass in the interests of candidates. The result will probably be a record vote polled for a municapl election.

Supervisors Name Officers For Election

The board of supervisors met yesterday forenoon and selected the election officers and polling places in the county for the presidential primary election on May first. There are now 172 polling places in the county necessitating the appointment of 1032 election officials who will receive $10 each, maing a total of $10,320. The rental of the polling places will necessitate a similar outlay, while advertising and supplies will cost a goodly sum so that elections are expensive. There are nearly 10,000 precincts in the state and thus an idea can be gleaned as to the enormous sum is to be expended in the commonwealth.

According to the latest tabulation of County Clerk Elizabeth M. Kneese, the entire vote of the county to date is 24,507, of these 18,519 are republican, 5090 democrats, 19 prohibition, and 879 declined to state party affiliation. It is believed that before the November election the registration of the county will reach the 30,000 mark.

Revolt Against Sanity Pleas Seen

Southern California, with the Hickman case fresh in its mind is in revolt against California's new statute relative to insanity pleas in murder cases.

Letters are pouring into the gubernatorial office from every section of the south demanding legislative action to plug the insanity loophole.

Insanitay pleas promise to be one of the live issues of the next legislative session, with some of the more agitated citizens even urging a special session to consider the problem. Several legislators are out in favor of the death penalty for all murderers —sane or insane.

Mrs. Anna Bennett Robb is selling the Broadway Shoppe, which she has conducted for several years and will leave on May 15th for Chicago to spend the summer with a son, who is a construction engineer for the Inland Steel Co.

High School Election

James D. Hedge and Judge Charles A. Shurtleff were the two high men in the election for trustees of the Sequoia Union High School district held last Friday. The election was a three-sided affair between Hedge and Brown, the incumbents and Shurtleff. The results for the district were Hedge 814, Shurtleff, 675, and Brown, 598.

John W. Poole, was the only candidate for the position of grammar school trustee in the Redwood City district, a position he has held for 12 years. He received a large complimentary vote.

Death Car Driver Held to Answer

As a result of the death of Thomas Yates, 19-year-old Daly City youth following an automobile accident at Millbrae on February 22, George W. Brazelton, 33, San Francisco building contractor, will have to answer to a charge of manslaughter following a preliminary hearing in the court of Justice of the Peace Ellis C. Johnson this week.

It is alleged that Yates was sitting in a parked car, and that the car driven by Brazelton crashed into the parked car and threw the Daly City boy through the windshield and upon the pavement, causing injuries which resulted in his death.

Brazelton was accompanied by his wife, who was also injured and has been under the care of a doctor since. Brazelton has been at liberty on $5000 bail. The date for hearing in the Superior court has not yet been set. The case is being handled by Richard Bell, assistant in the office of District Attorney Swart.

Well-known Man of Menlo Dies

Just a little more than a week after his brother, W. J. Murray, passed away, J. J. Murray, a pioneer resident of Menlo Park, answered the final summons late Wednesday evening at the Community hospital at Beresford where he had been confined for several weeks. Som years ago he suffred a paralytic stroke that rendered him an invalid, finally succumbing to a stroke which attacked him a month ago at his home in Stanford Park.

The deceased was born at Searsville near the site of the old St. Denis Church 64 years ago. There he passed his boyhood, growing up on the farm and becoming a sturdy youth. He was tall, strong, and a fine specimen of perfect manhood.

The deceased was a farmer by occupation, tilling the soil in and about Menlo Par for years. He owned a small farm in Stanford Park, where he spent his declining years in peace and comfort.

The funeral will take place tomorrow morning, Saturday, from the Tinney Funeral Home in Palo Alto at 9 o'clock, thence to the Church of the Nativity, where the remains will be blessed. Interment Holy Cross Cemetery, Menlo Park. The deceased is survived by two sons, Thomas L. Murray, James Murray and dughter, Mercedes O'Rourke. The oldest son of the deceased, Joseph Murray was the first soldier to give up his life for his country during the world war having died at San Diego right after his enlistment, early in 1917.

MAN WANTED HERE; NOW IN PRISON

Sheriff J. J. McGrath received word yesterday that Manuel Silvera Souza, alias Cardoza, who was wnted here on charge of passing bad checks, has been convicted of the same charge in Santa Clara county, and is now serving time in San Quentin. Souza was wanted here on a warrant sworn out by M. V. Nunes of South San Francisco.

Nunes stated that Souza asked him to cash a check for $140. He was unable to cash the check, and Souza asked him to go with him to the bank and ilentify him. At the bank Nunes was asked to sign the check, which proved to be no good.

A large number of Scottish Rite Masons of this city attended the Maundy Thursday services at the Scottish Rite temple in San Jose last evening. Roy W. Cloud of this city, secretary of the California State Teachers' Association, was the speaker of the evening. The Scottish Rite Easter services will be at the temple at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

LET CONTRACTS; BUILDINGS HERE

Work to be Started Immediately on Two New Business Blocks For Broadway; Others Expected Soon

WORK TO START ON NEW BUILDING

Structure To House Five Stores; Most Space Leased Already

Bids were received Wednesday by Hare, Brewer & Clark, Palo Alto realty firm for the construction of another business building on the firm's business block on Broadway. The bids are for the construction of a building on the corner of Broadway and Webster street adjoining the new theatre building now under construction by the same people.

The new building will occupy a space of 50x150 feet and will be occupied by the Woolworth store. Another store will have a frontage of 23 feet on Broadway and a depth of 75 feet and will be occupied by a drug store. On Webster street there will be three small stores each 25x23 feett.

The building will be one story and will be of the same type of architecture as the theatre building now under construction. Work on the latter structure is progressing rapidly, despite the rainy weather which slowed up excavation work. The excavation for the foundation of the building is almost complete and carpenters are now busy building the forms for the concrete.

When completed the structure will cost in the neighborhood of $220,000.

The theatre will be one of the latest designs on the peninsula, and will be occupied by the Sequoia Theatre of this city, one of the well-known Arkush shows, which operate some of the finest show houses of the state. The second story in the central portion of the building will be devoted to offices.

CONTRACT LET FOR NEW BUSINESS BLOCK ON HIGHWAY CORNER

A contract was let yesterday to J. S. Malloch, San Francisco builder, by Loupe & Chacquette, owners of the corner lot at Broadway and the highway, in the Perry addition, for the construction of a business block on their property. The contract price of the building is reported to be about $30,000, and work will begin within 30 days.

The building will be a one-story, brick structure of Spanish architecture. The corner store will be large and will be flanked with smaller stores facing on Broadway and on the highway. The property is diagonally across from the entrance to the high school and is across Broadway from the property which is at present occupied by the Union Oil Company. It was reported some time ago that this property would also be used as the site of a large business building as soon as the lease of the oil company expires.

Building construction has taken on increased activity here within the past week. Two business [illegible] struction on Broadway and another is to be started immediately. The firm of Whitcomb & Smith, who sold the property on which Loupe & Chacquette are to build, also announced this week that another building is also being considered for Broadway. Plans on the latter, however, were not far enough advanced to make a definite announcement.

Promotion Association Holds Big Meeting

The regular weekly meeting of the Redwood City Promotion Association which was held Wednesday night in the Intermediate School [illegible] attendance of the very important and encouraging reports were made by the various committees. After the close of the meeting the candidates for public offices of Redwood City, of the Good Government League were introduced and each candidate addressed the large assembly. Their remarks were well received. Closing with a heart to heart talk on the political question from Attorney James Davis, the meeting adjourned to the Domestic Science room where refreshments were served.

Slugging Taxi Driver Returning From Texas

Jack O'Connor also known as Henry O'Connor, San Francisco taxi driver, who made his escape just in time to avoid arrest in 1924 with Miss Elizabeth Saunders, has been arrested in Texas and is now enroute to the jail here in company with Deputy Sheriff Maloney. O'Connor has been sought for by police and sheriffs for four years. He was arrested in Texas and held for local officers.

O'Connor is charged with having robbed and attempted to kill W. R. Brooks, a mining man. Brooks is said to have been lured into the car driven by O'Connor by Miss Saunders, who was in league with the driver. The taxi drove out of San Francisco and near Tanforan the driver is said to have attacked Brooks, and left him apaprently dead by the side of the road, after robbing him. Miss Saunders was convicted and is now serving time in San Quentin.

Papers for the extradition of O'Connor were secured by District Attorney Swart from Governor C. C. Young. The granting of the papers was protested by the mother of O'Connor, who is a member of the San Francisco police force.

Aviation Topic At Kiwanis Club Meet

Commercial aviation has come to stay and even now forms an important part in the nation's business of transportation, according to Maurice M. Smith, traffic manager of the Boeing Air Transport, Inc., of San Francisco. Smith explained the methods by which goods and passengers are speeded across the continent in 31 hours with safety.

George Baker of the American Railway Express Co also addressed the Kiwanians on the subject of the use of air transport by the express company, and cited a number of instances in which the quick transportation afforded by air transport had saved concerns using it large sums of money.

Harvey E. Conner of this city, who recently went by air to Chicago, told of the comfort and pleasure which the trip had afforded him. The chairman of the meeting was Dr. Herbert Clattenburg.

U. S. Constitution Examinations To Be Held Here May 19th

The San Mateo County Board of Education will conduct an examination in the U. S. Constitution on May 19th for those teachers desiring to take the same in order to complete their certification. The examination will be given at 9:30 a. m. in the Central School on Broadway, Redwood City.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

California's World War veterans served their home communities better in 1927 than did the veterans of any other state. That, it was announced last week, was the reason for national official of the American Legion unanimously awarding to California the James A. Drain trophy for community service of Legion posts throughout the state.

Miss Edna Stangland will assume duties July 1 as chief of the State Division of Adult Education, succeeding Mrs. Ethel Richardson Allen, according to an announcement by William John Cooper, State superintendent of public instruction. Miss Stangland has been secretary to the State superintendent for several years and recently has devoted part of her time to adult education work.

Announcement that the United States War Department has allowed California an additional $60,000 for use in construction work at the new National Guard encampment site near San Luis Obispo was made a few days ago by Adjutant General R. E. Mittlestaedt. This follows a Federal allotment of $120,000 made several months ago. Construction work is now in progress.

Enforcement of the $6,000,000 bond issue for State parks by the board of directors of the California State Automobile Association was announced last week by E. B. DeGolia, chairman of the association's forestry committee. The motorist's organization supported before the legislature the legislation providing for submission of the bond issue creating a State park commission and authorizing a survey by that body to determine what scenic areas in the State should be included in a State park system.

As evidence that State publication of school textbooks is a paying proposition, State Printer Carroll H. Smith announced a few days ago that he has just completed preparations and distribution of civics texts at a cost of 47.7 cents each, as compared with an average private publishers' wholesale price of 96 cents, f.o.b., San Francisco. The editions ran 125,000 copies.

San Francisco and Oakland aspirants for State barber licenses will have need for long-haired friends when they appear before the State Board of Barber Examiners next June. The board announced a few days ago that each applicant must supply his own "patient" when he undertakes to prove his ability as a hair-cutter. The San Francisco examinations will be on June 4 and 5.

Attorneys of California have been set to studying law. The board of governors of the State Bar has mailed to every member a questionnaire requiring answers and suggestions on various problems of legal procedure and from these returns plans to formulate a program of law revision to be submitted to the legislature in January. Among the subjects of study outlined by President Joseph J. Webb of the State Bar are: Improved methods of jury selection, abolition of demurrers and motions to strike out and the elimination of other time-wasteing devices. Five sections—civil procedure, criminal procedure, courts and judical officers, regulatory commissions and ethics—have been formed.

Responsibilty for the failure of the St. Francis dam near Los Angeles early on the morning of March 13 was placed squarely with the builders of the structure by the Governor's commission appointed to investigate the disaster. The findings of the commission were: 1.—The failure of the dam was due to defective foundations. 2.—There is nothing in the nature of the dam to indicate that the accepted theory of the gravity type dam is in error. 3.—The failure of the structure indicated the desirability of having all of such structures erected and maintained under the supervision and control of State authority.

One of the big airships which will be used in the Los Angeles to San Francisco passenger service of the Western Air Express, was given a test flight at the Fokker plant at Hasbrouck Heights, New Jersey, last week. The plane made a speed of 120 miles an hour, according to word received here. The big monoplane will be one of five available in the service according to Harris M. Hanshue, president of the Western Air Express. A feature is that there will be an absence of noise or vibration in the passenger cabin which accommodates 15 persons. The service will begin May 1 and the 360 miles airline distance will be covered in three hours, thus providing one of the fastest services in the world. The planes will leave each terminal at 10.30 a. m. daily and lunch will be served abroad. Each plane will carry two pilots.

Oil field operations reported to State Oil and Gas Supervisor R. D. Bush during the week ended March 24, 1928, show 11 new wells started, as compared with 21 during the previous week. Of the 11 notices to drill filed, 4 were for wells in the Long Beach field, 1 in the Richfield field, 1 in the Goleta field, and 5 in the fields of Kern county. The total new wells this year is 242, compared with 367 at the same date last year. Tests for water shut-off numbered 24, compared with 23 during the previous week. Yearly total to date, 294; total to same date last year, 278.

A contingent of twenty-five prisoners from San Quentin Prison, assigned to the Inskip Grade road camp in Tehama county for work on the Red Bluff-Susanville Highway, arrived at the camp last week. Actual work is expected to begin this week. The prisoners were brought from San Quentin in a stage bus under two guards. Arrangements had been made at the camp to receive the men and supper was served when they arrived. Another group of thirty men will arrive at the camp this week and two weeks later another group of thirty is scheduled.

California law gives deputy State fire marshals the same powers as police officers in making arrests without warrants and provides "that they shall not be liable for civil action for trespass committed during the discharge of their duty." The statute was thus interpreted by Attorney General U. S. Webb in an opinion rendered to State Fire Marshal Jay W. Stevens.

California will receive more than $1,000,000 of the total $7,500,000 total forest highways within the national appropriation for the construction of forests of the United States. This is according to the National Automobile Club. On account of their extensive national forest lands, California, Idaho and Oregon are alloted the largest sums. The funds become available for highway construction July 1st.

Petaluma has adopted the uniform traffic ordinance which is now in effect in fifty-six cities of the State. The ordinance consists of a model code drafted by the legal departments of the California State Automobile Association and the Automobile Club of Southern California and sponsored by the two motoring organizations for adoption by California cities. Standardization of municipal traffic regulations is sought that motorists may be free of divergent laws, thus facilitating traffic and reducing hazards.

B. B. Meek, State director of public works, has recommended to Governor C. C. Young the appointment of a high grade hydraulic engineer to make an immediate examination of all dams in California, exclusive of federal projects which are tested by the government. This recommendation was by Meek a few days ago. It followed an announcement by the director that he concurred in the recommendation of the State commission, which probed the failure of the St. Francis dam that the State supervise the construction and maintenance of future dams.

More than 2,000 delegates from every section of the country will gather at Sacramento April 14 for the opening of the national convention of the Young Women's Christian Association. The convention will continue through April 20, and will be preceded by a number of division meetings, including the Girl Reserves and college, town and country groups.

Employes in State offices and laborers on State projects will work only five days a week in the future. Such was the prediction made last week by Frank C. McDonald, president of the State Building Trades Council, upon his return from the twenty-eighth annual convention of the organization, which closed last week at Petaluma. For, at the 1929 session of the State Legislature, efforts will be made by the council to have the five-day week for all State employes put into effect.

California's total estimated daily average crude oil production increased 8,500 barrels during the week ended March 24, figures released a few days ago by the American Petroleum Institute show. The total estimated daily average crude oil production for the week was 618,000 barrels as against 609,500 barrels for the week ended March 17. The increased production is attributed chiefly to increases in the Long Beach and Ventura avenue fields. In the former, production last week increased to 123,500 barrels from 119,500 barrels the preceding week, while in the latter, production jumped to 47,500 from 45,000 barrels.

Precautionary steps to prevent disease as an aftermath of the North Sacramento flood will be taken immediately by the State department of public health, with Dr. Walker M. Dickie, department director in personal charge of the situation, it was announced a few days ago. Attention will be centered on maintaining a clean supply of drinking water. The announcement said a staff of State health workers will be transferred to Sacramento from the Santa Clara river flood area in southern California.

Flashing six times a minute with higher visability than any similar light in the world, the Standard Oil Company's Mount Diablo air beacon will be in operation next month. Visible from the air for between 100 and 150 miles, the light is so advantageously placed on Mount Diablo that it would require a tower 4,000 feet high to equal its position. Since the mountain is surrounded by vast areas of comparatively level land, and is virtually at the intersection of the transcontinental and coast air lanes, there is no more appropriate place in the world for such a guide to travelers of the air.

California will have a population of 11,866,000 by 1947, according to an estimate made public a few days ago by Alexander R. Heron, State director of finance. The estimate is based on statistics compiled by Heron's department on State population and tendencies at the State institutions over a period of 20 years. The State population as of last year was placed at 4,910,000, and it was predicted the number of residents will be 7,639,000 by 1937.

The Alameda County Board of Supervisors last week awarded a franchise to T. E. Tomasini to construct a six and one-half mile bridge from Point Fleming, Almeda county, to Bluff Point, Marin county. Plans and specifications call for an expenditure of $18,500,000.

Highway and bridge construction contracts involving expenditure of $241,455 in five counties were awarded a few days ago by the State Department of Public Works. The counties are: Del Norte, Humboldt, Glenn, Madera and Imperial.

San Francisco Bay districts cities will be linked with San Diego and Los Angeles by a daily passenger air service beginning April 14, it was announced a few days ago. Giant 12-passenger, tri-motored, all-metal Ford parlor monoplanes will be used, according to Maddux Air Lines, Inc., of Los Angeles, which will operate the service. The northern terminal will be at the Oakland airport on Bay Farm Island. It will be one of the longest strictly passenger air lines in America, and will operate on a schedule of 4 hours and 15 minutes between Oakland and Los Angeles.

STRIKE ONE
AW! WHERE DO YA GET THAT STUFF? I COULDN'T A REACHED IT WITH A LADDER.
STRIKE TWO!!
JUST BECAUSE YOUR OLD MANS AN I.W.W. YA THINK YA CAN CALL A STRIKE WHENEVER YA PLEASE.

Is This an Old One?

"Gentlemen," said the judge, addressing the members of a jury in Texas, "you will please take your accustomed place in the court."

And ten of them crowded into the dock.

A Kitchen Martinette

Mistress—And why did you leave your last position?

Cook—The missus objected to me bossin' her in her place.

VERY SLOW

First Bug—"Going to the snail races?" Second Bug—"No, I'm too restless to spend a week watching a snail race!"

Pedantic Porter

Passenger—I say, porter, is this my train?

Porter—The company's train at your service, sir.

Of Trumps

The Girl—I should think you'd feel happy as a king when you're in the air.

Aviator—Happier. I'm an ace.

Vaudeville Mix-Up

Acrobat—I object to my going on after the monkey act.

Theater Manager—I see. Folks might think it was an encore.

Wrong One

"Hello, Perkins, where did you get that black eye?"

"It was only a sweethearts' quarrel."

"Sweethearts' quarrel! Why, your girl didn't give you that, did she?"

"No; it was her other sweetheart."

WHY GO THROUGH?

Alice—"Do you go through your husband's pockets?" May — "No; you've got every cent when you reach the bottom—why go through?"

Thrilling Tales

"Fishing is slow," said the golfer. "For instance, you fellows can never have the same thrill of satisfaction as we do when we drive."

"Oh, I don't know," said the angler; "sometimes I catch a fish as long as one of your drives. But, of course, I throw that sort back again."

FARMER'S WIFE GETS STRENGTH

YOUR INTEREST IN "THE OTHER FELLOW"

NO BUSINESS TODAY, regardless of how thoroughly it may be intrenched in the progress and prosperity of the country, can stand or fall alone. A loss of efficiency in one industry not only hurts that enterprise itself but slows up every other key industry, shaking the credit foundations of the nation and causing unemployment, lower wages and eventually higher prices. The link between all industries therefore, must be particularly close and dependent. The closer the relationship becomes, the greater the efficiency and progress that can be developed until we have an interrelationship of all business life that is backbone of the nation's progress.

BUILDING OUR GREAT INDUSTRY

IN VIEW of the approaching week which has been set apart as "Education Week," the consideration of the greatest industry of the world may not be out of place at this time. Education in the United States is the greatest industry—an industry in which 27 million people are engaged and in which sums are invested which surpass any other field of endeavor.

Education in this country is not a unified industry, however, each states does the best it can and methods vary quite radically. Trade finds a central meeting point in the United States Chamber of Commerce or the department of commence, agriculture in the department agriculture, so with shipping and all other branches of industry except the greatest industry in the country which must do the best it can with what each individual state sees fit to do for it.

This condition will be relieved, even if it will not be obviated by the creation of a department of education. The creation of a Department of Education is again proposed in a bill introduced in the 70th Congress, by Senator Curtis, of Kansas and Representative Reed of New York, includes all of the features of the Curtis Reed Bill introduced in the Sixty-ninth Congress but with an additional provision for a council of state superintendents of education or of the highest elected or appointed state school officials, who shall meet annually in Washington, at the call of the secretary.

Practically the only grounds on which the proposed Department of Education has been opposed have been that it would have a tendency towards Federal control or interference with state rights. These are practically the same arguments that have been advanced against the establishment of almost all of the present departments of the government.

This is an educational era. The character and amount of education which would have sufficed fifty years ago will not be accepted today. Every age has needed men of splendid preparation.

This age, however, demands them.

FARMERS INDORSE HOOVER

OSCAR E. BRADFUTE, of Xenia, Ohio, one of America's most widely known farmers, has issued an open letter to the farmers of the United States indorsing the candidacy of Herbert Hoover for President.

Mr. Bradfute was for three years a member of the Board of Control of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, at Wooster, O., to which he was appointed by the Republican governor, Geo. K. Nash.

He was appointed as member of the Board of Trustees of Ohio State University by Gov. Myron T. Herrick, on Aug. 21, 1905, and served in that capacity for 20 years.

He was the first president of the Greene county, Ohio, farm bureau, was later president of the state farm bureau of Ohio and still later served three years as president of the National Farm Bureau, the largest farm organization in America. He has been a director of the International Live Stock Exposition since its beginning in 1899.

Mr. Bradfute indorses Secretary Hoover for the Presidency because he is keenly alive to the best interest of the American farmer, and because he stood more nearly behind every principle of organized agriculture than any other man in public life.

CHOOSING A VIEWPOINT

CALIFORNIA IS FOOD PRODUCER

Bulk of Nation's Fruit Originates in West

By CLEM WHITAKER

SACRAMENTO, April 5 — Regardless of the fact that much ado is made about the scenery, climate, natural resources, industrial development and great oil wells that spout liquid gold, California's most important mission is that of the "good provider" for the peoples of the world.

That, at least, is the contention of G. H. Hecke, state director of agriculture, who insists that essentially California is the promised land of milk and honey, and shall always remain so.

Despite temporary upsets, like the Los Angeles dam disaster, the Sacramento Valley floods and the marketing trials of the farmers, this state, says Hecke, is literally the food basket of the world, with millions dependent on it for their daily bread and additional millions drawing on its food supply each year.

New York, the world's greatest metropolis, would virtually face near- starvation, for instance, if her California food supply was suddenly shut off.

Into the New York markets, this state poured no less than 56,890 carloads of fruits and vegetables last year, exclusive of canned goods—one third of the great city's imports, Hecke points out. In many leading crops, California was the sole source of supply.

All of New York's grapes, 26,260 carloads, came from California. All of her prunes and canned peaches also came from California. Nearly 75 carloads of ornges, some two-thirds of the New York consumption, were grown in California's great citrus belt, together with some 1400 cars of lemons sent to the eastern metropolis.

Again, all of New York's apricots—63 cars—came from this state, while 539 of her 540 cars of artichokes originated here. Six out of seven cars of avocades imported were from California and 403 of the 780 carloads of asparagus came from California's delta fields. With figs, our shipments totaled 62 out of 64 cars; cherries 375 of 559 cars; cantaloupes, 4920 of 7454 and cauliflower 1674 out of 2,030 cars.

"Why, we even give New Yorkers their bad breath," said Hecke, pointing out that 117 cars of garlic were shipped to the big metropolitan area.

And with the other cities and states, the ratio of California imports is much the same.

FIGURES MAY PLAY PART IN CAMPAIGN

Former Budget-Maker Busy in Politics

Nellie Brewer Pierce, former state budget-maker and once the most powerful woman in California politics, may be back in the limelight during the next governorship race.

The famous Mrs. Pierce, who ruled supreme in matters of finance for more than two years and prepared the Richardson economy budget, is now said to be in the employ of a leading contender for the governorship.

Nellie, as the boys call her in Sacramento, is delving into figures again, according to reports. And Nellie, they all admit knows her figures.

One of the 30,000 California women who cook with electricity

The morning shower refreshed the air. Warm sunshine has dried the grass. It is an afternoon to be outside.

Friends are coming for dinner—four people beside the family! And this woman is spending the afternoon in her garden.

She uses an electric range. The whole dinner was placed in the oven at one o'clock. At four, the electricity turned on and started the meal cooking. A Temperature Control keeps the oven at the proper temperature. At six, the current will turn off. The insulated oven will keep the meal warm until dinner is served.

That is the freedom you'll enjoy with electric cooking.

Why don't you eliminate the monotony of preparing meals by using an electric range? You can see them at our office.

New rates make electric cooking very economical

STATE AID PROMISED IN FLOODED AREAS

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, April 4 — Official aerial photos of the flooded area in the Sacramento Valley will be taken by the state government to guide reclamation and flood control engineers in mapping plans to avert further overflow, Governor Young announced.

Maps of the flooded areas, reduced to accurate scale, will be prepared from the photos.

The Governor also announced that provision has been made by the state to finance all necessary repairs, even when the levees affected are not state-built dikes.

"The St. Francis Dam has broken! Spread the alarm!"

IT was the voice of a telephone operator—another—and another.

Though in imminent danger themselves, as the black wall of water loosed its violence on a sleeping countryside, these young women in towns of the stricken area, promptly and coolly passed this midnight call of warning—warning of impending doom. Constables, town officials and others in the path of danger were notified by telephone. Instantly, with shrieking sirens and clanging bells the alarm was spread—and hundreds of lives were saved.

The world hears little of the "spirit of service" until times of emergency, but behind the scenes in the telephone world this spirit is always present. Telephone users confidently rely upon the devotion to duty of the men and women who make this service possible.

MANY REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD TRY CHIROPRACTIC

When one certain measure fails to bring desired results, every thinking person naturally turns to something else. This holds true in everything in life.

If your pen fails to write, you select another. If your merchant hasn't in stock what you want, you go to one who has. If your home is too small, you seek larger quarters. If one remedy fails to give relief in sickness you try another.

The failure of one thing to bring satisfying results constitutes a real reason for the trial of another.

In the past few years there have been thousands of cases cured by CHIROPRACTIC, where medicine has been given a timely trial and proved an absolute failure—therefore there are thousands of reasons why you should try CHIROPRACTIC.

These reasons are not theoretical—they are practical. They are not abstract principals — they are concrete facts They are not advanced by CHIROPRACTORS, they are given by medical doctors.

In studying many medical books written by the best medical authorities, you will find opposite the names of hundreds of diseases one or more quotations to the eflect that little or nothing can be done for them by medicine.

Are you suffering from any of these? Then try CHIROPRACTIC, for medicine is confessedly a failure in all of them. And the reason is not far to seek. In every one of these diseases relief can come only upon removal of the cause of the disorder.

This is exactly why CHIROPRACTIC succeeds—because it removes the cause, which is deficient nerve supply of the affected parts.

Sequoia Stamp Club Elects New Officers

The Sequoia Philatelic Society, the club for those interested in the hobby of stamp collecting, held their regular semi-annual election Tuesday evening and elected the following officers: President, Barnet Kniveton; vice-president, Freeman Cullom; secretary - treasurer, Catherine McCarthy.

These officers will meet in the near future and lay plans for club promotion and program. The members are preparing frames of stamps to put on exhibition in the very near future.

This club has between forty and fifty enrolled. It is one of four Philatelic Societies which are promoted by the Y. M. C. A. in the county.

The next meeting of the club will be held on Tuesday evening, at 7:30 at the Sequoia high school Anyone interested in this hobby or desiring to learn how it may be used to develop world interest, geography, art, interest in science, music, keen observation, neatness, etc., are invited. Ralph Talmadge is the leader of this club.

Talking Movies Are Feature of Show

The sensational success of Al Jolson in "The Jazz Singer" at the Embassy Theatre has prompted the management to hold the picture a second month. It is now entering the sixth week of its local engagement and the crowds which still attend this talking and singing picture attest the extreme popularity of Al Jolson and the Vitaphone.

The story of the "Jazz Singer," is one of simplicity. In brief it concerns a boys overpowering love for his Mother for whom he sacrifices his biggest chance to fame, but succeeds later. Al Jolson as the cantor's son makes his debut before the camera and delights with the naturalness of his presence.

Through the Vitaphone all the songs and jokes of this inimitable black face comedian are reproduced with unerring fidelity. Included among the numbers which he sings are "Dirthy Hands, Dirty Face," "Toot Toot Tootsie," "Mammy," and his latest song hit, composed by himself, entitled. "Mother of Mine."

Supporting Jolson in the cast of "The Jazz Singer" are May McAvoy, Warner Oland, Eugenie Bessie Besserer and hundreds of other well known actors. The engagement is limited at the Embassy and all are advised to attend matinees.

Casting of Bridge Piles Progressing

New Bridge Progressing Ahead of Schedule

The construction work on the new bay bridge being built at Little Coyote Point by the San Francisco Bay Toll Bridge Co. is at least half a month ahead of schedule, according to reports published this week, and the report states the bridge is expected to progress at the rate of a mile a month. The report states that over 20,000 lineal feet of flotation channel, by means of which the materials and equipment for the bridge are to be floated into place, has been completed. The fleet of dredges employd are now engaged in widening the channel to the necessary width. The entire eastern portion o fthe channel will be completed by the middle of April.

The casting of concrete piles for the bridge is actively in progress, both at the Alameda yards of the Raymond Concrete Pile Company which holds the general contract and the San Francisco yards of the Foundation Company, which has the contract for the central piers.

Unless unforseen difficulties occur, the piling should be completed some time during next October and the laying of floor slabs will be completed at about the same time. The slabs are laid in sections which interlock and are later covered with a pouring of concrete which fills in the interlocking crevices making a smooth finish or permanent durability.

Work on the approaches to the bridge which began more than 3 months ago is progressing rapidly, the San Mateo county approach being planned to link up with a road from Coyote Point which will join Third avenue in San Mateo, at the intersection of the new Bayshore highway, also under construction.

On the west approach, over 75,000 cubic yards of embankment have been placed by drag line dredges, and over 20,000 cubic yards on the east approach.

Before the end of April, it was stated, the Raymond Concrete Pile Company will be turning out 200 concrete piles a week, and 100 sections of concrete spans at Alameda yards.

Judge Denies Divorce; Sets Aside Decree

An interlocutory decree of divorce granted by Judge Buck to Mrs. Margaret McKeever on November 9, 1927, was set aside this week when the same judge denied a divorce to Mrs. McKeever from Myron McKeever. The reason for the decision was that evidence presented was false. The original complaint was filed on August 15, 1927. In it, it was asked that property at Huntington Beach be given to the plaintiff, Mrs. McKeever. The property was awarded to the defendant by Judge Buck this week on the grounds that it was his prior to his marriage.

The McKeevers formerly resided on Hudson street in this city.

Redwood City Girl Hurt in Auto Crash

Miss Eleanor Shotten, 21, of this city was cut about the face and shoulders by broken glass when a car in which she was riding crashed with one driven by John Reilly of San Fancisco in San Mateo early Monday morning. Harold Nelson of this city was the driver of the car in which Miss Shotten was riding. She was given first aid treatment at the Mills Memorial Hospital in San Mateo, where she was taken by Albert Charrot of Millbrae.

Insect Pests, Topic Of Exchange Talk

A. W. Tate, Jr., county horticultural commissioner of San Mateo county, was the speaker at the weekly meeting of the Redwood City Exchange club Tuesday. Tate spoke on some of the insect pests which his department must combat, especially the tomato weevel, which was found infesting vegetables in several parts of the state last year and which resulted in a quarantine of certain parts of the state.

Sidney Moore, one of the proprietors of the Nipa Hut on the highway, was welcomed into the club as a new member.

The chairman of the meeting Tuesday evening was Harry Hallett, proprietor of the Central Market on Broadway.

GOVERNOR YOUNG APPOINTS BY CATALOG RECORD

"Who's Who" Is Guide For Choice of Aspirants

Governors, it may now be recorded, have their little idiosyncrasies, just like men about town.

Governor Young, though he probably doesn't realize it, has a "Who's Who" complex that pops up whenever he makes an appointment.

Before announcing the appointment of an official, the governor invariably holds the press representatives at bay awhile he checks up on the chosen one in "Who's Who." If his candidate's name is not on the roll the governor's day is ruined.

Few Future Teachers Know, "What Is a Colt?"

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, April 4 — Teachers sent out from the State Teachers Colleges of California will know their "stuff" when they arrive in country schools, it was announced, following a round of "ask me another" applied to the 435 student teachers of a typical college.

"Is a calf, pup, chick, colt or kitten the name of a young horse?" was one of the questions, and most of the students were on to their horses and picked a colt.

But no one was 100 per cent perfect down the list and only 43 were "passing." Walter Rogers of Corning scored the highest marking, 98.

The Colfax Bookplate

CHAPTER I

Darrow's Is Different

Had it not been for those tidy little yellow notes cut thriftily eight to a sheet of copy-paper and distributed free on Saturday to the staff at Darrow's New and Second-Hand Bookshop, we should never have begun Monday morning in the state of tension which was so appropriate a commencement for that portentous day, nor should we have ended the whole affair of the Colfax bookplate in such a blaze of glory. But Mr. Roberts, our canny statistical Caledonian manager, had noted that on each morning of the preceding week an average of nine members of the staff had punched the time-clock between five and sixteen minutes past nine, and he had concluded that the reason could not always have been the "Difference in Clocks," the "Subway Block," or the "Alarm That Never Went Off at All"—important features as these all are of modern commercial civilization. Consequently, at noon on Saturday he had broadcast a general storm-warning in the language of diplomacy, or, to be more plain-spoken, on yellow notes enclosed in our pay-envelopes. I transcribe my copy:

(Typewritten)

"Miss Constance Fuller:

"Nine o'clock Monday please!

"Thomas Alexander Roberts."

I believe that every morning when I enter the silent shop I must unconsciously breathe a prayer of thanksgiving that, although life is by no means always May, at least I belong in Darrow's. I started selling books before it got to be a "New Career for Women," with courses on how to do it, and then obtained, through the college employment bureau, a position in Darrow's. A bright young woman was wanted, "to assist." And at what, pray, could one assist in a bookshop except at selling books? At least, so I reasoned. The idea of doing so struck me with great force, though it struck me alone. On hearing that Darrow's had hired me, my mother exclaimed: "Dear child, I'm so happy for you! I always wanted to work in a store; but had I breathed the fact at your age, I'd have been put out in the snow a la 'Way Down East.'" My brother said: "How much are you going to get? Strike for a raise." And my dear father on learning that I declined to hang around his neck like a beautiful womanly millstone, was noblest of all, for he merely remarked: "Well, Darrow's is different."

It is, indeed. None but that overworked adjective describes it. There are many bookshops, but there is no other quite like Darrow's. It is an oasis in the desert of a rushing, prosaic business neighborhood, unaffectedly picturesque. Sixty years ago, the building was a vast, comfortable corner dwelling, with a stable, doubtless full of fat horses, down the side street. Now that stable is the shipping room; and where the ground floor dining room used hospitably to receive a dozen guests an evening in addition to the 1860-size family, Darrow's book shop today receives its customers. The shop also extends over the site of the old kitchen, pantry, and store rooms, and the upper reaches of its lofty walls inclose the old-time first-story parlor.

Every new customer coming in past my desk beside the front door gasps at the noble spread of the book-shelves from floor to ceiling on the long north and south walls, with a gallery running around them at half their height. He will find fiction on the tables, standard works on the walls, classified subject-collections in the alcoves. He may view at leisure the fine collections of old prints and engravings which ornament the gallery railings, and in which we do a considerable business. And he will certainly admire his own reflection in the bright brass cage of our little elevator at the rear of the central aisle, which it is the chief joy of Ulysses S. G. Jackson, our elderly colored janitor, to polish if necessary, to the neglect of his other duties.

It was with Ulysses, as usual, that I exchanged my first greeting on arriving at the bookshop that famous Monday. For thirty years Darrow's and every individual and circumstance connected with it had constituted Ulysses' life. His chief passion, besides brass polishing, was that thrilling daily magazine entitled "Daily Snapshots," which, as everybody knows, consists of three-quarters pictures and one-quarter 14-point type, and which features with double spreads such important news items as "Right Arm of Statesman's Divorced Wife Found in Well." He now folded up his last dust cloth and approached me solemnly, drawing a copy of this journal from beneath his sweater.

"You've been out early for the paper, Ulysses."

"Yas'm. Does you want to see it?"

"Yes, what's the news this morning?" For twenty-four hours the country must have been inconveniently free from crimes of extraordinary violence; the editors of "Snapshots" had been reduced to using for a front-page sensation scientific observations of latest visiting foreign headliner, which were summed up in the caption: "Psychic Expert Delineates Next World."

"Cain't be no worse'n this one," remarked Ulysses.

"What's the matter, Ulysses? Have you got rheumatism?"

"No'm, I ain't got no rheumatism, I got a message. Somep'n bad's go'n' happen."

"Pshaw, Ulysses! something bad's always going to happen."

"No'm, you're hiding from yourself, Miss Fuller; somep'n bad's go'n' happen. I knows it."

"What bad thing do you think's going to happen?"

Ulysses debated silently, his mouth curved into a crescent, points down. The contemplation of some concrete catastrophe seemed to cheer him. Finally he murmured simply:

"I dunno. Maybe Mist' Darrow's go'n' lose some money."

I was much tickled by the fancy. If Mr. Darrow did lose some money, it would be powerful bad luck for everybody in the house, since, to tell the painful truth, Mr. Darrow was not a remarkably good loser of anything, particularly money.

"Oh, I hope not!" I sighed.

"Yas'm, that's right; I does, too," agreed Ulysses, heartily.

His poise quite restored, he picked up the "Pictorial" and moved off to polish the alcove bookcases.

It was a pleasant side of my work that my own special hobby became a knowledge of bookplates. Whenever I could discover and identify a new one, and sell it to some one who liked it, I was more than happy. But certainly there could never have been an apparently more unlikely morning than that of our famous Monday for bringing to light a real treasure among bookplates. Nothing was in my mind except my very important indexing job as I set about assembling my catalogue cards, just as the vanguard of punctual arrivals began to pour in.

Heading the procession came Mr. Roberts, tall, gaunt, keen-eyed. One by one they raced past me with the typical Monday business "Good morning"—smile, grouch, resignation. Then a loud click sounded as one by one they punched the time-clock just inside the shipping-room door in the rear hall, to the right of the elevator shaft.

Miss Wilkes, our "dean of women," her new wisteria velvet fall hat perched like an imperial Russian cornet on her stiffly waved gray hair, showed all her teeth and addressed me as "Dear." I noted with interest that contrary to her custom—for in her exalted position she mingled not with the herd, and well-known social ambitions made her quite inaccessible—she was escorting a lanky and silent but astonishingly pretty young stranger, who had the largest head of soft wavy chestnut bobbed hair and the thickest war-paint I had ever beheld in a long and tolerant experience.

While awaiting the elevator, Miss Wilkes abandoned her convoy, to greet Mr. Edward Case, the shop manager. Miss Wilkes highly approved of Mr. Case. He was a bachelor in the late forties, he lived at a club, he always displayed fine raiment on his tall, well-built person, and was altogether to her taste, being deemed the most dashing, if not daredevil figure in our select community.

He was a member of the group about whom legends had grown up. He was more or less traveled and had polished manners, so he could be conveniently provided with a past in foreign parts by those determinedly romantic; and there were few to contradict these dreamers, for Mr. Case was the ranking employee, next to Ulysses, in length of service, and nobody really knew a great deal about him. I once had suggested that this was probably because there wasn't a great deal to know, as the poor man was the only conventional person on the staff.

My other colleagues, who arrived briskly in due season, were: Daisy Abbott, outwardly a fair, frail flower, but really pretty hard-shelled; Emily James, plain and thoroughly seaworthy; and George Henry Dibdin, a nice lad who when in France had got to be liked to read, a Red Cross lady in a hospital library having unwittingly given him a lead toward a career which he had speedily proceeded to follow when he came back with his helmet.

Our select clerical force entered and betook themselves to regions above. Mr. Riggs, the stout head shipping clerk, dashed in distractedly.

"Mr. Roberts come yet?" I'm short handed; one of my men's down sick and the other's still off on his wedding trip—drat him!—and them government books laying a mile deep in yonder!"

And then arrived Mr. Darrow himself, for even he came early that morning, as an example. Very short and stout, stiff, bald, and clean-shaven, he moved down the aisle "like an armored tank," to quote Mr. Dibdin, bestowing a bow on me, one of the employees he spoke to.

Bookselling was Mr. Darrow's one, his only love. He had not only made his shop different and famous, he had also, years ago, married his sister to an Ashland. In the trade this achievement recalls a master stroke; the Ashlands have been known in London for generations as rare-book dealers, so that this political marriage gave Mr. Darrow an international business connection. He was little seen in his own shop, however, and I fear truth compels the statement that we managed without him. To his employees he was known chiefly as a Voice on the telephone.

With his arrival, the whole staff was accounted for, with one exception: Peter Burton, our young traveler. He had been expected back from a rather long trip the previous Friday, but had not arrived. It was his first important trip; Mr. Darrow had hitherto done most of the rare-book buying himself, though he had been training Peter as a future assistant. But a bad cold a fortnight previous had deprived him of his voice for several days, and he had been obliged to dispatch Peter in his stead on an extended tour he had been preparing to take.

Nine o'clock pealed through a silence unmarred by any click from the time-clock, and all of us in the shop settled down to our respective duties. As I always notice whoever passes my desk, coming in or going out, I noticed that our first visitor that morning, who entered at about half-past nine, was a dignified white-bearded old gentleman known to some of us, at least, by sight. He moved slowly down the center aisle, and finally entered the last alcove on the right, under the placard "Medical Works."

Not for about a quarter of an hour did the door open again; then a rather distinguished-looking young girl in a black fur cape drifted in, but I was so busy I paid little attention to her. I paid none at all, other than to note his entrance, to the third arrival, a young man. He flushed past me almost before I could look up, and I merely noted his somewhat loud attire and brief-case.

Becoming increasingly busy, I did not look up from my desk again until I gradually became conscious that some one else had not only entered the shop but gone far past me. I raised my eyes, and saw Peter Burton strolling toward the elevator, dragging his suitcase with that air of complete detachment from the world and the fullness thereof which belongs only to Nirvana or the lowest depths of desperation.

Without a second glance, I knew Peter's case must belong to the second category. Mr. Darrow, though not given to admiring things about other people, considered Peter's business ability promising. I had made his acquaintance seven years before, when he was a blue-eyed, curly brown-headed cherub of vast proportions, adorned with a bed-ticking apron and attached to the shipping office. There he had contrived, through some oversight with reference to a nail on a packing-case, to tear a barn door in my brand-new skirt one day when I went in with a message. This comparatively mild disaster apparently determined him to run off and enlist in the navy on the spot, and I felt moved to investigate until I discovered the circumstances which caused such extreme grief.

I found them to consist almost entirely of a very refined widowed father with a very medium-sized independent income. There was also a small sister with unconventional manners. As Peter had a vulgar practical taste for making a living, Mr. Roberts was persuaded to find him occupation better suited to an ardent mind than nailing up boxes; and he now promised to become one of Darrow's chief sources of revenue. And it was myself, whom Peter had declared to have been, so far, the greatest influence in his life, whom he completely ignored that frosty October morning!

All that sustained me under the blow was the arrival of our elderly pet college professor, Prof. Royall Harrington, of a history department perched up on Manhattan Heights. I welcomed the companionship of this excellent old-fashioned gentleman, who was much attached to Darrow's, had had an account with us for years, and enjoyed nothing more than spending hours in our society. I had sometimes thought that his rather timid manners had prevented him from making many close friends. Still, he was highly esteemed in learned circles as a leading scholar in American history, and I had heard he had cultivated a public presence in amazing contrast to his diffidence in society. These two assets, combined with a charming voice in which a faint Southern accent occasionally could be heard, had won him some reputation as an orator.

Of course I was the first person he encountered on entering the shop, and he was full of a tale that morning. I had to let the catalogue go, therefore.

"I've just had an invitation I like so much!" he beamed. "I'm invited to speak in a little town on the Maine coast that's about to celebrate its hundred and fiftieth anniversary, Carroll Bay's the name. Many years ago it was my summer playground."

"So they want you to come back and help celebrate?"

"Yes, and I'm glad to go now," said the professor, musingly. "I shouldn't have cared to much sooner, perhaps—"

"No?"

"You see, my younger brother and I used to spend our vacations there, usually together—"

"Indeed!"

"And the poor boy was drowned, over twenty years ago, going to the rescue of some fishermen whose motor got stalled during a storm; he was washed overboard on the return trip. The town put up a cenotaph for him, in the little churchyard. So, after all these years, as they still seem to remember us both, I believe it would be ungracious not to go up and rejoice with them over their anniversary."

"Such historical commemorations appeal to you, I'm sure," I observed.

"Always. Some call me old-fashioned for sticking, as I do, to the traditions of my ancestors, but I don't care!"

The professor fell to musing, and then, almost unconsciously, he suddenly dropped a confidence, as a lonely person often will:

"Perhaps it was kindest—at least to my brother—that he was taken when he was. We're not all well suited to bear the blows of life. He was highly romantic, a dreamer; injustice or cruelty would have killed him . . ."

Professor Harrington's voice died away, considerably to my relief. He sat brooding a moment longer, then came to himself, with almost startling unexpectedness, bounding off the desk.

"I must be about my business!" he cried. "I haven't been interrupting yours, have I? Might I have a wee scrap of paper, to make a few notes? No, no, this will be quite adequate, thank you!" And declining a proffered pad, he leaned over and fished Mr. Roberts' yellow note out of the wastebasket, and at last fluttered smilingly off.

Average Man Puts in Eight Years of Work

The average man is at least sixteen before he starts serious work and even then there are not many of us who do more than eight hours a day.

The average man's working life is about thirty years, so the person who works eight hours out of each fourteen for thirty years has done ten years' work in his lifetime.

This is reckoning that he has worked eight hours a day and seven days a week, which of course, none of us do. We have to remember the Saturday half-holiday and Sunday, which leave only 44 working hours for the week. This means cutting our ten weeks down by roughly two years, so that a life's work is reduced to only eight years!

Another deduction must be made for illness, so out of those eight years work another six months must be taken. In point of fact, the actual loss is a fraction under six months, but, in round numbers, there is only seven and a half years of work in the ordinary person's lifetime.

According to Hoyle

Even among the elders we see so little of the old-fashioned fastidiousness nowadays that we were attracted by an incident on the street last week. We saw a white-haired gentleman approach two boys who were playing with a kitten and join them. Then we saw him extract from his pocket a pair of gloves, return one of them and pull the other carefully over his right hand. This completed, he employed his gloved hand to pat the kitten and tickle its ribs for a minute or two. He then arose, carefully removed his glove, replaced it in his pocket, bowed to the two boys and strolled on.—New Yorker.

Western Ideas Make Progress in Far East

The list of illustrations of the new form which the reaction to the impact of western civilization is taking in China might be made almost endless, writes Grover Clark in the Century Magazine.

Everything in the life of the people, from their clothes, their toys and their food to their most fundamental ethical and religious conceptions is being touched by this new spirit. One sees worcestershire sauce being used to flavor the most time-honored Chinese delicacies. Chinese gowns are worn because they suit the climate; but under them will be western trousers with their convenient pockets, and the wearer's feet will be shod with western style leather shoes because they wear and keep out the damp better than Chinese style cloth slippers.

The old family and marriage system is being discarded by the younger generation, but in its place the western ideal of marriage as a union of equals is being adopted.

Famous Educator

William Holmes McGuffey was an American educator born in Washington county, Pennsylvania, September 23, 1800; died in Charlottesville, Va., May 4, 1887. He was graduated at Washington college, Pennsylvania, in 1826. He was professor of moral philosophy at Miami university, Woodward college, Cincinnati, and then until his death professor at the University of Virginia.

Mexico Has Pyramid

There is a pyramid near Puebla, Mex., that is comparable to the pyramids of Egypt, according to Liberty. It was erected by the Toltec Indians, is more than 200 feet high, and has a base line of 1,060 feet. Cheops, largest of the Egyptian pyramids, has a base line of 750 feet and is 400 feet high.

EXOTIC SCARFS FOR SPRING; LOUNGING PAJAMA COSTUMES

NO "SINGLE blessedness" for the modern scarf, no indeed! Rather "the more the merrier" expresses the philosophy of these gay silken squares and triangles which have cast such a glamour of color over the world of fashion.

According to the teachings of current scarfology, one must wear not one but two or more silk kerchief squares or triangle scarfs at a time.

FEATURE FOR SPRING

Which sounds a bit extreme, that is, before one has acquired the knack.

That is why the young woman posed for the photographs reproduced in this picture—to "tell the world" of the latest way to arrange twin scarfs. If two exotic scarfs be posed one about the neckline the other as a jabot, as shown to the left in the illustration they will prove absolutely transforming to even the most sedate of frocks. The experiment is worth trying. Don the black dress which was never quite becoming or the hopeless brown or dull gray which you bought in a moment of abstraction, adjust two scarfs with that debonair displayed in either of the accompanying pictures, then await the comments of your friends. Such music will greet the ears as "how stunning you look" and "since when and where have you discovered the fountain of youth?"

Seriously speaking, there is nothing equal to a gay scarf or two to enliven the spring costume and to give it and its wearer a youthful aspect as well. Fashionists are placing much confidence in the scarf to add charm to the spring picture.

Enthusiasm for the scarf has reached to such a point that not only is it considered as an accessory item, but stylists are this season launching a thrilling new idea—that of the scarf blouse, also scarf dress. Having sensed the color and design possibilities presented in the scarf as incorporated in the making of the dress, fashionists are playing up the theme in most fascinating ways. These high colored daringly patterned silk triangles and squares are firing the imagination of genius to the point that they do not hesitate to cut these colorsome scarfs into pieces which are worked into the garment in the form of insets, yokes, pockets and such. The charm of these scarfs is that, being hand-blocked, they insure distinction and individuality.

Pajamas have made so bold as to appear in print this season—in gay print fabric, if you please. What with cotton weaves now being accorded a position of flattering fashion importance, also the fact that spring is here with summer soon to follow, wash fabrics have become an outstanding medium for the making of pajama costumes.

It is difficult to believe that most of the new cottons and rayons are really what they claim to be—nothing more or less than simple washable fabrics. One would more readily credit them as belonging in the silk class. Just because many of these tub materials can scarcely be told from silk they are enthusiastically indorsed by stylists for the making of the daytime pajama lounging ensemble.

When one takes note of the wearable and supremely attractive three-piece ensemble group in the picture, it is easy to understand why so many women are wearing pajama costumes in preference to the regulation "house dress."

The very new idea of using print for coats which is being so stressed in the matter of street and sports dress is also very happily developed in three-piece pajama outfits. The picture tells the story of a pajama ensemble which was shown in a recent fashion show held for the purpose of demonstrating the charm and possibilities offered by washable fabrics as brought out this season.

The sleeveless blouse is one of the chief attractions of this model. There is also a note of chic in the fact that the trousers are buttoned close about the ankles. The materials used include a solid buff cotton weave which has the appearance of washable broadcloth. The flowered fabric for the coat has a bit of silk intermingled with cotton. Just to give it tone, the designer adds a necklacelike cord from which is suspended a heavy black silk tassel.

One way of adding charm to the pajama costumes fashioned of solid-colored washable sateens, cotton broadcloths and pongees is to embroider the blouse with gay yarn flowers. Try this! You will be fascinated with results.

Japanese coolie coats printed on cotton crepe are cleverly worn with plain colored two-piece pajama sets. The fact that the entire ensemble is washable ought to count in the favor of these pajama costumes for wear either in the home or on the sandy beach.

Speaking of materials suitable for negligees, the new rayon satins are marvelous; first because they look very elegant, as if, indeed, they cost many dollars a yard, and, second, because with all their expensive appearance they wash as beautifully as any linen or cotton. The production of rayon satin brocade has especially been brought to a high point of perfection. For the making of a durable handsome pajama ensemble, rayon brocade satin has become a favorite medium. It looks best bordered and trimmed with solid colored rayon satin.

Apple Monuments

A well-known monument to apples, in the form of a pillar, was erected in 1895 at Wilmington, near Lowell, Mass., to the Baldwin apple. There is also a tablet in the town of Camillus, Onondaga county, New York, on the original site of the Primate apple tree. Another monument in New York is the monument to the Northern Spy, erected in 1912 at Bloomfield. The Wealthy apple is commemorated by a monument at Excelsior, Minn. This was unveiled in June, 1912.

Trace Old Race for Masonic Symbols

Briton Follows Trail for 22 Years.

Amarillo, Texas.—The trail which he has followed for 22 years in quest of proof of the existence of an ancient race to which he believes the foundations of the modern Freemasonry may be traced has brought Dr. John Winthrop Sargent to the United States.

He is in Texas to continue his research, which has taken him through Mexico, Central America and most of the South American countries.

Doctor Sargent is an explorer and director of the Dr. W. H. K. Staver expedition of the British Royal society and a nephew of the late John Singer Sargent, the painter.

By tracing the culture of this race through pottery and monument designs Doctor Sargent says he has become convinced that its civilization was of even a higher order than that of the ancient Egyptians. He says he found proof that that race had a knowledge of irrigation superior to that of modern times.

First evidence of the race in the United States was found at Three Rivers, N. M., he says, and the trail was continued to this vicinity.

The two cultural motifs which he especially seeks portray a man standing with arms upraised, one arm at right angles with the other, and a deer with [illegible] resting its breast.

"These two motifs," he declares, "have a decided bearing on an ancient society which has come down to the present and which is found in the Masonic lodge."

Doctor Sargent hopes to go on to Nicaragua to continue explorations which were terminated last December 18, when Sandino, the rebel leader, ordered him out of the country within six hours.

Gilding Lily Out, but Roses Are Illuminated

Boston.—There may be no profit in gilding the lily, but it appears that illuminating the rose is a pretty good business. At least engineers found it so in the garden of Gordon Abbott, Boston bankers, at Manchester-by-the-Sea.

Roses are illuminated by electric globes of proper hue. Tiny spot-lights produce special effects on rock formations, floral groups and fountains. By means of a mechanical moonlight effect the lawns can be flooded with soft steel-blue light remarkably like Luna's own product.

The camouflage artist was industrious, too. He concealed wires and lights in trees and shrubbery.

Grain Is Currency, French Courts Rule

Paris.—As in ancient days, farm produce still is recognized as legal tender.

Farmers' contracts to pay bills in wheat and other foodstuffs have been held valid by the French courts, although contracts for payment in stable currencies have been voided repeatedly.

Farming "on shares" is a custom here as in other countries, and French farmers were astounded to have their usual practice questioned as an apparent violation of the law requiring the execution of all contracts in paper francs. The wording of the law apparently ignored "payment in kind," but the courts held that food, as a basic material, is relatively one of the most stable mediums of exchange.

Looking to Future Crop

TAKING TO WONDERING

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THE king was in a sad way, so the legend ran, as kings have often been, and are still today, if reports are to be believed. There was a great oak tree that grew against the palace wall that was so big and so thick in its branches that it shut out all the sunlight from the king's palace. The king had offered many, many dollars to anyone who would cut down the huge tree and let the sunlight into the great castle in which he lived, but no one had been able to do it, for as soon as ever one chip of the oak's trunk flew off under the stroke of the ax two more grew in its stead.

And this was not all. The king had dug a well which was to hold water for the whole year, but although all his neighbors had wells, when they came to sink a well for the king whose palace stood high above the valley, they had gone down only a few inches before they struck an impenetrable rock

But the king had set his heart upon having the oak tree cut down, and upon having a well sunk that would furnish his household with abundant water, and to anyone who could accomplish these two things he agreed to give the lovely princess for a wife and half his kingdom. It was a prize well worth working for, for the kingdom was a noble one and the princess was beautiful beyond description.

It was Peter and Paul and Jack—three brothers—who set out in the hope of finding a way to cut down the tree and to dig the well.

It was Jack whose curiosity led him to wondering concerning a sound of chopping which he heard up the hillside as the three brothers were setting out toward the palace, and following the sound he came upon a magic ax chopping away at a great tree, and this he put into his pocket.

And this same curiosity discovered to him a spade that could penetrate the hardest rock, and a stream of water which flowed uninterruptedly as it was told to do. The older brothers mocked him for his curiosity but with the ax and the spade and the little stream he was able to fell the oak and to dig the well and to fill it to the brim. And so he won the wonderful princess for his bride and he came into possession of half the kingdom, while his brothers had their ears cut off and were sent to a desert island.

And as the story ends, "Well, Jack wasn't so much out of his mind when he took to wondering."

There are a great many clever young people today—clever as Peter and Paul and Jack—and a good many of these clever ones are in college and would gladly find an easy way to dig wells or to cut down oak trees, but they lack interest, they have no curiosity, they are not possessed with this wondering state of mind which led Jack to find the ax and the spade, and the trickling stream.

Makes for Increase in Grain Production

A newly invented German machine, designed to do for occidental grain fields what Chinese coolie labor has done for centuries in the rice fields of the East, is attracting considerable attention on the part of British agriculturists. Instead of sowing seed like an ordinary grain drill, it sets out sprouted and rooted seedlings at the rate of 12,000 plants an hour, one to every square foot. It is asserted that this method of raising grain requires only one-thirtieth as much seed as now used, and that it will yield from three to five times as many bushels to the acre. This is said to be the result of the greater freedom each plant has to develop a more vigorous root growth beneath the soil, and, especially to tiller, or "stool out," above its base. From thirty to forty stalks a plant are usually developed.

"Business First" in Mind of Bridegroom

Senator Smoot talked to a group of reporters about business. Among other things, he said:

"Sentiment should be kept out of business. That is an excellent precept. But even excellent precepts can be carried too far.

"At a fashionable wedding not long ago the bridegroom failed to turn up. Noon sounded, then one o'clock, then two. Everybody was in despair.

"But a little before three the young man arrived, smiling and breathless. He explained that he had been trotting about from bank to bank cashing the numerous checks that had figured among the wedding presents.

"'You can't stop a cashed check,' he murmured tenderly to his bride as they took their places at the altar."—Detroit Free Press.

Crooks Laugh at Law

New York.—The sardonic leader of a two-world crime band left his "calling card" pinned over the heart of a too curious member of his mob and now at last the police have a clew to New York's master criminal.

The "calling card" was a roll of $100 bills and they were pinned with a pistol bullet—the same pellet of lead that closed the prying eyes of Bill Doyle, alias Doll, ex-convict and safe cracker.

Behind him, the man who is believed to be an associate of the late Gerald Chapman and Dutch Anderson, left evidence of one of the most highly organized bands of international criminals that police have ever been confronted with.

Recently there was a shot in the ground floor of a luxurious uptown apartment house just after dark and a moment later a tenant entered in time to catch a glimpse of an expensively dressed man and woman step over a body lying in the doorway and leisurely stroll out the entrance and step into a taxicab.

The name on the doorplate of the apartment was Berkowitz, but the well-dressed couple had been known to the other tenants as Mr. and Mrs. "Ike" Behrman. When the police arrived a little later they found the apartment was empty save for a tiny white dog cowering in a corner, while an electric piano was still clamorously playing "Blue Heaven." The occupants had left behind expensive wardrobes. Several fur coats and a half dozen beautiful afternoon and evening gowns were hanging in the woman's closet, while carefully tailored suits for all occasions were in the man's compartment. The apartment was elaborately furnished with costly period furniture.

But what interested the detectives most when they arrived was the fact that at last they had been called to the headquarters of a long-sought international gang.

More than 300 telegrams and cablegrams from known criminals in Europe and this country and letters from Sing Sing were found. There were coded messages and cable messages which indicated the occupants had been involved in diamond smuggling and safe robbing in London, Paris, Berlin and the greater cities of the United States. There were cheap cotton gloves such as safe blowers wear, half a dozen hats and caps with labels torn out, drills and empty revolver holsters.

In addition there were automobile licenses for two cars—although the Behrmans were never seen to use anything except taxicabs. There was a book for a bank in Muncie, Ind., where Chapman and Anderson once had their headquarters.

Detectives, after several days of study, have reconstructed events leading up to the crime and believe that it was carried out along the following lines:

Will Doyle, the man who got a bullet through his heart, was one of a hundred or more of the master criminal's contact men. His job was to spot safes to be robbed, houses to be looted and to establish connections with fences who would dispose of the spoils or sell the gems which the leader's European agents smuggled into this country.

It is believed several of the gang took part in the daylight robbery of a nearby theater the day before Doyle was shot to death. The spotter is believed to have made a mistake and the band looted the wrong theater, getting away with only a few thousand dollars where they had planned to make a big haul.

When Doyle got his share, which amounted to only $100, he complained to the payoff man, insisting that he should have more, and accusing the leaders of "playing crooked." There was an angry exchange of words and Doyle threatened to get even.

That evening, Doyle, still angry over the meager profits that came to him as his share, broke the most stringent law of the gang and walked boldly into the home of the master criminal.

Waving the roll of one dollar bills in his chief's face he demanded more money and threatened to "squeal" if it were not forthcoming at once.

The leader settled the debt as it usually is settled in gangland. And before leaving he pinned the payoff money to the victim's body as a warning to his other followers.

Detectives are confident that the many addresses and messages found in the apartment will lead to arrests in the capitals of Europe as well as in several cities in the United States. While they are following leads, the main hunt is centering on the capture of Behrman.

When a key is turned in a new door lock the attached knob spins around without operating its latch.

Pronunciation Brings Cycle Thief to Grief

London.—A bit of snappy detective work has just been accomplished by a Northamptonshire policeman, who evidently also is a student of phonetics.

The "bobby," on duty near the village of Towcester, had a hunch that a man who passed him, wheeling a bicycle, might not be the machine's legal owner.

"Where do you live?" the policeman asked.

"Tow-cester," the man replied, pronouncing the word as it is spelled.

"No, you don't," the policeman retorted, and arrested him. At the police court the next day the man pleaded guilty to the theft of the bicycle. The "bobby" explained that no resident of Towcester ever referred to the town's names as other than "Toaster," and that it was the mispronunciation that confirmed his "hunch."

WOODSIDE

At two elections held in Woodside within the week the incumbents were returned to office. Joseph H. Hallett as school trustee, was returned by a 4 to 1 vote, and Selah Chamberlain as fire commissioner, had no opposition.

The Parent-Teacher Association also held its annual election of officers on Thursday last, the following officials were selected: Mrs John D. Gish, president; Mrs. Leland Johns, vice-president; Mrs. Byron Ralston, secretary; Mrs. George Givens, treasurer; Mrs. Dudley, parliamentarian; Mrs. Albert Meyers, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. James V. Neuman, auditor. These officers will assume their duties on the first of July.

The Easter service of the local church will be in charge of the children of the Sunday School, who have prepared a special program for the occasion. All are invited.

Mrs. Rudolph Schilling, who with her two sons, has been for nearly a year in Europe, has returned to San Francisco and visited her home here this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Jackling, nearing the end of their world tour, arrived in New York this week and were met there by Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Moffitt, who will accompany the Jacklings on the last lap of their trip from New York to San Francisco.

Building operations here are in full swing. An army of workmen is employed on the construction of the new $120,000 stable being built by Mrs. William Roth as well as at the Hammond and Rayner places. Six new cabins are in course of construction in Woodside Glens.

Elzear Bonanfant, operated on two weeks ago for appendicitis, has returned to his home here, where he is recovering rapidly.

Mrs. Andrw Nelson, taken to a San Francisco hospital two weeks ago for observation, has been removed to the home of her daughter in San Francisco, and expects to remain there sereral months before returning to Woodside.

Dr. Bradford Leavitt of Pasadena will arrive at his place here on Tuesday for a short stay.

Local Boys Enjoy Friendly Indian Hike

Saturday was a big day in the history of the Friendly Indian Tribes of the southern part of San Mateo county. The first attempt at a combined tribe hike day for the members of these younger boy clubs of the Y. M. C. A. in this end of the county proved to be as great a success as when the affair was a county-wide event.

The boys from San Carlos and Woodside as well as the boys from Washington school were taken by auto to the Lincoln school in Redwood City, from which point the hike was started.

Sixty boys were in attendance and enjoyed it to the fullest. The start was made at 9:45 a. m. and ended off Emerald Lake No. 2. The boys were divided into two groups under the supervision of Roy A. Hohberger, the local Y. M. C. A. secretary, and Elmer Steinke, one of the "Big Chiefs."

Roy A. Hohberger told the boys of the coming events for Friendly Indians, including the summer camp for which boys are already enrolling.

The Fraternal Aid Union will give a card party in the Foresters hall Tuesday evening. Mrs. Harry Potts is chairman of the committee which is making arrangements for the event. Admission will be 25 cents.

Proceeds of Programs To Buy Uniforms

Since additional uniforms are needed for members of the band, the proceeds from the musical program to be given by the Sequoia High School band and orchestra on April 19 will help to pay for them. Of the thirty-seven members of the band, only twenty five have uniforms, which are white with purple bands around the cuffs and collars and purple trimming on the caps.

The Chamber of Commerce has guaranteed the sale of 600 tickets, and the hign school must sell that amount. The Kiwanis Club, Exchange Club, American Legion and Spanish-American War Veterans have offered to sell 100 tickets each. "The purpose is to get everybody interested in the band and orchestra, which represent the community as well as the high school. They have already played at several community affairs and can be used at other times," stated Mr. Argo, principal of Sequoia.

Gen. Geo. S. Evans Post of the Woman's Relief Corps will give a card party Wednesday afternoon April 18th in the Odd Fellows hall Admission will be 25 cents. Mrs. Bertha Potts is chairman of the committee which is making arrangements.

Lights Sought For Coastside District

Residents and property owners of Rockaway Beach on the coastside of this county presented a petition to the oard of supervisors asking that a system of street lights be installed and that a lighting district be formed. Plans of the proposed system accompanied the petition. The matter was laid over by the supervisors for later consideration.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Gibson entertained a number of their friends at their home on Grand street, Saturday evening. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Fugeon, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Rice, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Chittendon and William I. Clark.

Junior Colleges Show Increased Popularity

Junior Institutions of State Now Superceed College Departments

By ESTO BROUGHTON

SACRAMENTO, April 5 — Irrespective of whether Mohammed went to the mountain or made the mountain come to him, California today is bringing the mountain of collegiate knowledge home to her boys and girls.

The home town junior college, first conceived to relieve the state university of its congestion by taking students during their preliminary training, has really increased the university's "growing pains," according to Cooper, who estimates the state university will have an enrollment of 20,000 by 1935. For junior colleges merely whet the appetite for more learning, he maintains, and most students want to finish their university training.

Bigger and better junior colleges are now the aim of educators and as a result, 24 high schools that formerly maintained college departments have abandoned them to merge into larger units, and a junior college district cannot be launched now with less than $10,000,000 assessed valuation.

The collegiate department of the Turlock High School, a pioneer in the work, for instance, has been relinquished with the founding of a lusty Modesto Junior College in 1921. This college, drawing students from as far south as Livingston in the San Joaquin Valley, has an enrollemtn of over 520 and is second only to Sacramento in number.

Compton and San Jose are two of the high school districts handling junior college work which are in a process of transformation into college districts. Compton numbers 150 students, while San Jose, gathering its students from all points of the Santa Clara Valley, except those served by Palo Alto, has an enrollment of 585.

Two Orange County high schools Anaheim and Fullerton, which likewise, pioneered in the college movement, have abandoned their separate units in favor of larger ones which Glendora and Laguna Beach students also attend.

Placer High School at Auburn prepared to give collegiate service to the surrounding towns of Colfax, Roseville and Lincoln in 1917 but gave this up with the development of a mammoth junior college at Sacramento with an enrollment of 1210, accepting students from this territory.

One of the most consistently sustained efforts to maintain college work has been by the San Benito high school at Hollister, now enrolling 148. Likewise the Lassen high school at Susanville initiated college work three years ago and shows a steady increase, according to Cooper.

The Marin Junior College at Kentfield is a husky young college, less than two years old, now numbering over 300 students and giving the young people of Mill Valley and San Rafael college opportunities.

Many localities find it unnecessary to maintain their own junior college because of the accessibility to State Teachers Colleges, Colusa, Gleen, Sutter and Butte county high school graduates, find they may obtain similar work at the Chico State Teachers College, since the placing of the normal schools upon a collegiate basis. And for this reason probably Tehama county dropped college work at the Red Bluff high school after it had become a pioneer in the movement.

San Diego and the surrounding territory is served by the San Diego Teachers College, while Fresno Teachers College takes care of Lindsay and the southern end of the San Joaquin Valley.

Los Angeles city high schools were the second in the state to institute post graduate work, but with the magnificent development of the Southern Branch of the University of California, the college needs of not only Los Angeles city but also Antelope, Bellflower, Hawthorne, La Puente, Downey, San Marino, and other towns in the county are well taken care of the state school head maintains.

Meanwhile Davis University school largely takes care of Solano county's local problem.

MILK BOTTLE EXCHANGE AIDS DAIRIES

Overhead Cost Cut By Reducing Waste

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, April 4 — "Put and take" is now a dairyman's game since Dr. C. U. Duckworth, chief of the State Bureau of Rairy Control, has instituted a bottle exchange so that California diarymen may get their own bottles back.

Six exchanges are now in operation and others are planned, already they have cut the cost of operation, for loss of milk bottles and other containers constituted one of the principal items of expense.

A San Jose dairyman reported that while it took a car load of bottles a month to deliver their milk formerly, they had not bonught any new bottles for three months.

FARMERS PROTEST FARM TRUCK CLASSIFICATION

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, April 5. — California farmers almost unanimously are "agin the government" on one point at least J. J. Denel of Bakersfield and others representing the California Federation of Farm Bureaus told Governor Young in voicing opposition to a ruling of the state motor vehicle division demanding payment of commercial license fees for farm trucks.

Failing to secure action through administration sources, the fight will be carried to the Legislature next January, Denel said as he prepared to return to Bakesrfield today.

ELEVEN MILLION SEEN AS STATE'S POPULATION IN 1947

Estimate Based on Analysis of Past Years

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, April 4 — By the year 1947, California will have a population of 11,866,000.

A. R. Heron, state director of finance, so estimated today in a report to Governor Young.

Heron's estimate was based, he said, on a careful analysis of growth over the past ten years, coupled with conservative estimates by private organizations of expected development.

The population estimate was given in connection with a report forecasting the population of state institutions in coming years.

Build up Baby's vitality now before hot weather!

ICE will help you do it-

Summer has always been a problem to mothers. Not so great a problem as it used to be, thanks to the all-year-around use of ice. For it is just as important that Baby's milk be kept cool and wholesome during these spring days, with their rapid temperature changes, than it is during the warmest summer months.

A child whose vitality is kept at par, who is in the pink of physical condition always, will come through the summer with scarcely a fretful hour.

Moreover, as his appetite develops, he will need other foods in addition to milk—orange or tomato juice, broths, cereals, codliver oil. All should be kept cool. All require a well-iced refrigerator.

In fact, many foods for the entire family look better, taste better, and are better when preserved with ice. The year-around use of ice extends the season for fresh fruits and vegetables. The tinkle of ice in glasses adds to the attractiveness of the table at any season.

And when you take ice from the ice man, you can always get all you want. You can be sure that it not only keeps your food cold enough, but moist enough. For the moisture given off by melting ice is as important a part of food preservation as coldness. Ice keeps food fresh, prevents it from drying out, purifies the air, and carries off odors and impurities. It adjusts itself to any season, any condition.

Your Ice Man Sells Refrigerators

To get the greatest benefit from ICE make sure that you have a good refrigerator. One that is properly built, and large enough for your needs.

Your ice company is a specialist in refrigeration and will gladly give you competent advice—either selling you one at a low price and easy terms or recommending the right box for you. Just "ask your ice man."

Council In Session

All members were present at the council meeting Tuesday. Much routine business was transacted. A communication was read by the clerk from the Southern Pacific Company in reference to the reinstalling a flagman at the Ravenswood crossing. The letter was in reply to a resolution passed at the last meeting of the council asking the company to place a flagman at that dangerous crossing. The tenor of the letter gave very little encouragement but the company explained the request was referred to the division engineer and would be taken up in due time. Harcom supplemented the explanation of the company by saying that Mr. Anthony of the company, had met with the members of the board last week and he insisted that the flagman at the Oak Grove crossing be taken off. The members would not listen to the request and plainly told Mr. Anthony that all responsibility for such an action would rest with the company.

A lengthy communication was read from the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company denying the request of the council asking that the five-cent toll between Redwood City and Palo be removed. The company maintained two separate exchanges at these places and that it would be impossible to remove the toll and give the service now being enjoyed by the subscribers in those localities.

The following reports were read and ordered filed:

J. J. Harcom, building inspector, reported that since January 27 and to March 31 four permits had been granted, from which $7.60 had been received.

Chief of Police Furman reported that he had collected the sum of $992.78 for merchants' licenses, $40 dog licenses and $315 for fines and had made 25 arrests for violation of traffic laws and for transgressing the city ordinances.

The treasurer reported that he had received $2375.99 from various sources and had paid out $1,448.23, leaving a balance in the treasury of $927.74.

City Attorney George K. Whitworth reported that the hearing of the application of the Bear Gulch Water Company for a raise of its rates would most likely be postponed on April 9 after the examiner from the railroad commission had heard the company's side of the case. The people's case may not be put on for some time owing to the rush of business of the commission. He had talked with Mr. Reddington, city attorney of Atherton, and both agreed to be present at the hearing. The council gave Mr. Whitworth full power to act for the board.

The garbage ordinance introduced at the last meeting was read and after a few minor amendments was adopted. A receptacle containing 30 gallons instead of 25 gallons was selected by the council and this was acceptable to the garbiscian, who is to paint on his truck, "licensed garbage collector for Menlo Park"

No action was taken on the report of the city attorney in reference to repairing the highway in front of the grammar school. Harcom suggested that the incoming board wrestle with that vexed question. He thought the members of the present board had done their full duty and could conscientiously pass the matter to the new board.

The following claims were passed and allowed: R. Furman, salary, $125; A. Carlisle and Co., supplies, $23.18; L. H. Cook, salary, $25; Recorder, $25.15; Geo. K. Whitworth, salary, $25; F. I. Kurtz, salary and supplies, $69.73 Baston Price Company, $7.00.

No further business appearing the board adjourned to Monday evening, April 16 at 8 o'clock to canvass the election returns.

Menlo Presbyterian Church

The special Easter services will be conducted next Sunday morning and evening by the pastor, Rev. W. L. Bone, who will preach at eleven o'clock upon "Losing a Life to Gain It." At 7:30 in the evening the sermon subject will be "A Living Christ: What that Faith Means to the World." Special music will be sung by the choir as follows: "Christ Is Risen," by Noite and "He Lives Forevermore" by Wilson. At the evening service Mrs. Bearce will sing a special solo.

The Ladies' Missionary Society will meet at the home of Mrs. Bone at the Presbyterian Manse on next Thursday afternoon. Mrs. C. A. Glunz, missionary to the Phillipine Islands and a member of the staff of Silliman Institute, will be present to speak upon her work. Mrs. Glunz is a very attractive speaker and it will be a rare opportunity for any ladies, who will attend.

The "Rainbow Tea" served by the Ladies Auxiliary of the church last Tuesday afternoon was a great success, a large number attending. The decoration scheme which made use of all the colors of the rainbow was a subject of approving comment. Seven young ladies dressed in the colors of the rainbow served at seven tables which were decorated with flowers in the different colors of the rainbow.

Rain Fall

The rain fall for the last storm was 1-20 inches maikng 4 inches for the recent storm, totaling 13.20 inches for the year. This is still below the rain fall of last season.

City Election

The campaign for city officials is coming to a close. Next Monday the voters will go to the polls and register their choice for officials who are to govern the city for the next two and four years. This is a serious matter for the voter and taxpayer to consider. Stop and ponder and make the best selection so that Menlo Park will progress, go ahead by leaps and bounds and be an attractive place for the homeseekers and others who desire to enjoy the climate that is best by government test.

There are nine candidates for trustee, five of which are to be elected and to compose the council. Four of these, J. C. Brown, J. C. Ellis, J. J. Harcom and Fred Nessler have campaigned in a group, backed by certain citizens and endorsed by the so-called Good Government League, while the other five, Dr. A. E. Blake, W. E. Dale, W. H. Weeden, Alexander Walker and E. J. McLaughlin are endorsed by the Merchants' Association and businessmen in general.

Dr. Blake has served as mayor for the past four months with dignity, showing much ability as a presiding officer. He is a native of Menlo Park, being the first white child born in this community. By profession he is a dentist and has also practiced medicine. He is devoted to the best interests of Menlo Park and an advocate of strict economy.

W. H. Weeden is also a native of Menlo Park, and is a widely-known builder and contractor and is at present the building inspector of Atherton. He has had a wide experience in building and would be a valuable man on the board.

E. J. McLoughlin, the well-known shoe dealer, is a business man of ability, who believes in progress and economy in govern- Park booster.
Par booster.

Alexander Walker is a brick contractor with a long experience in building. He is a believer in economy and if elected will bring Scotch thrift to the council.

W. E. Dale, who came so near making the grade at the last municipal election, is the prosperous grocer, who will bring business ability and economy to the new council. He is a good-looking bachelor, who is certain to secure the support of the young ladies.

The slogan of these five is: "Progress and Economy," and all five having ability and experience, should fare well at the hands of the voters next Monday.

To Lease

The second story of the Van Horn Garage on the State Highway between Menlo Park and the San Francisquito Creek bridge. Apply for particulars to Joseph P. Ahlert, Menlo Park.

Van Horn Garage Leased

The Van Horn Garage on the highway, the property of John Beltramo, has been leased for a period of years to J. P. Ahlert, or his increasing plumbing business. He will occupy the whole of the lower floor on May 1. The upper story is for rent. For some time the present location of Mr. Ahlert has been somewhat cramped and so he decided to secure larger quarters. He had occupied it for twenty-three years, learning his trade in that shop from his uncle, the late J. P. Ahlert, who was Menlo Park's first plumber.

Contemplate $10,000 Building

The Menlo Park Feed and Fuel Company's big building on the highway has been leased to a garage man of experience. Edward Derry, president o fthe company, contemplates erecting a $10,000 building at the Derry Derry home in town. In the mean time the business of this prosperous concern will be conducted at that place.

Ceremonies Draw Large Crowd

The big initiation ceremonies of the Native Sons drew a large crowd to the Masonic Hall last Thursday evening. Several of the grand officers were present, and after the impressive ceremony, refreshments were served in th dining hall of the lodge. Twenty young men were demonstrated the mysteries of the order, in other words they rode the plump and bucking goat of the local parlor.

To Raise Tomatoes This Season

The 32 acres of land on Santa Cruz avenue, adjoining the Hermosa Tract, were leased this week to Mr. Enton, the berryman, who will raise tomatoes this season on the property and, perhaps next year set it out in strawberries.

Big Vote At H. S. Election

The big vote received by him at the trustee election last Friday showed the popularity of Judge C. A. Shurtleff in this community. He received 171 votes, Jas. Hedge, 93, and Mr. Brown 61. Seventy-five voters plunked for the judge, that is they voted only for Mr. Shurtleff, when two out of the three candidates were to be chosen.

To Give Card Party

St. Joseph Alumni will give a card party in Masonic Hall on Wednesday evening next. As this will be the first function after the lenten season, a big attendance is expected. Good prizes and many of them will be awarded the winners of the game.

Attention Voters of Menlo Park

Menlo Park, chosen in the early days by many of the great San Francisco pioneers as the location of their magnificent estate, was known the world over for its equable climate, its wonderful soil and the beauty of its natural scenery.

For many years there broad, oak covered acres were held intact, while Redwood City, San Mateo, Palo Alto, and Burlingame were developing into cities, but they are now being sub-divided, and many new residents have established their homes here.

Un-incorporated, Menlo Park failed to show the clean, sound growth of her sister cities, Palo Alto and Atherton, and her business development was retarded and property values lessened. Factions grew up and inharmony prevailed.

Incorporation was finally effected after many attempts about four months ago, and some progress has been made, but not enough. Discord and bickerings have marked the proceedings of the City Council, and merchants and residents have lost faith in the sincerity and ability of the Council as now formed.

We now propose, after earnest consideration and painstaking investigation, that these five men be elected on April 9th, to conduct the business of Menlo Park for the next two and four years.

Dr. Alfred E. Blake, professional man, Mr. Harry Weeden, experienced builder, and Building Inspector for the City of Atherton for several years; Mr. W. E. Dale, merchant; E. J. McLaughlin, merchant; and William Walker, experienced builder.

These men have pledged themselves to work, individually and collectively, for the best interests of their home city, Menlo Park; to co-operate in all matters of mutual interest with the Councils of Palo Alto and Atherton; to consult and advise with our business men and property owners in all matters affecting their welfare and benefit; to plan constructively and proceed vigorously in the building up of a community that will attract new investors and enhance property values of present owners.

PULL TOGETHER is their slogan, without selfishness or personal efforts to build-up a political machine for self interest.

They pledge themselves to secure and retain as public employees only such persons who will perform their duties without fear or favor, and manage the business of the city efficiently and economically.

This advertisement has been paid for by a number of business men and residents of Menlo Park.

Atherton Election

If the voters of Atherton have their best interests at heart, they will elect M. A. Harris, Clarence Walter and Charles Merrill, trustees, at the election next Monday. They are all splendid men, pogressive, honest and able, with a long experience in business and are well qualifiel in every way for the position to which they aspire. Taxpayers and voters of Atherton make no mistake. Keep these men in office, Judge Jennings is an aspirant for clerk. He should be elected. He is a young man of ability, with a good legal knowledge and a devotion to duty that will make him an excellent official. His vote should be unanimous.

66-Year-Old Paper Filed With Recorder

An interesting paper filed this week in the county recorder's office at Redwood City is a certificate for a 40-acre homestead west of Mt. Diablo, which was applied for by William O. Claycomb and which was signed by the president of the United States in 1862, Chester A. Arthur. Other signatures on the 66-year-old paper are those of M. H. Crook, secretary of state in 1862, and S. W. Clark, recorder at the general land office in Washington during that term.

George Marvin in Sunset Magazine says—

"The Bank of Italy organization is a great democratic fraternity"

MR. MARVIN pays a further tribute to the human, democratic character of the institution when he says:

"The employes and stockholders...for every Bank of Italy employe is a stockholder...are electrified by daily opportunities for individual initiative for original contribution; daily heartened by a healthy merging of coordinated service with self-interest."

Why not do your banking with an institution that reflects the democratic, progressive spirit of America in every phase of its activities?
